Saturday Nite at the Movies

The community organizations that brought you the two great evenings in years past, "Murder at the Library" and "Common Threads" are once again collaborating to present a festive evening of music, food, and entertainment to Winchester. Continuing the progressive dinner theme of previous productions, the Winchester Public Library, Griffin Museum of Photography, Winchester Community Music School, Jenks Center, and Multicultural Network have planned an evening of movie going fun that's sure to please you as it brings back memories of Winchester's past. The presenting organizations are committed to this on-going collaboration as a way to encourage friends and members of our organizations to connect with one another to nurture community and build stronger connections. We hope you will join us!

Park at the Jenks Center lot to pick up your free shuttle bus ride. Your evening begins at the Music School with delicious hors d'oeuvres, beer, wine and sparkling water while enjoying live performances of movie music themes. Test your movie trivia knowledge for a chance to win movie theater treats and then you're off to the Jenks for the next stop of the evening.

Were you here in Winchester in the 20s and 30s when controversy raged about the building of a movie theater? Following a scrumptious dinner at the Jenks, featuring favorites from the 30s, re-live that era and the debate that ensued as playwright Ellen Knight and Robert Hallisey from the Winchester Players take to the stage to present "Say 'NO' to Movies." With the assistance of audience volunteers, they will present a semi-staged Readers' Theater production that tells of the drama surrounding the building of a movie theater here in Winchester. You may recognize some of the key players. What side would you have taken?

Cap off the evening with an after-theater party at the Griffin Museum, where you'll have delectable desserts and coffee, and view movie clips. Buses will shuttle movie goers from one venue to another, so don't miss this unique and entertaining community event. Get your tickets early.
